Course Description:

This course will introduce GSPIA PhD students to the various approaches to the study of international affairs as well as a few broad areas of inquiry in the field. It covers “great books” in the study of international affairs, concentrating each week on a classic or important new work. This approach will provide a stable platform from which International Affairs students may delve deeper into the literature while apprising non-International Affairs students of the general structure and large debates in the field. Given the vastness of the field, there are many topics that we will not be able to cover. However, familiarity with the arguments covered is essential for navigating and making sense of the sprawling literature. By the end of the semester, students will possess the theoretical frameworks and analytical toolkit necessary to identify, read, and assess the quality of divergent positions on the topics we do and do not cover.

Assignments and Grading:

This course will be run as a true seminar; I will not spend class time lecturing on the material we cover. Our meetings will consist of, first, a presentation of the material by a member of the seminar and, second, a longer discussion by all members in which we focus on teasing out the precise arguments made and the implications of those claims.

The reading load in this course is generally one book per week (Weeks 3 and 4 are anomalies; we will discuss the class procedure for these meetings during Week 1). Due to variance in book length, the reading for some weeks will be heavier than others. Despite the occasionally heavy load, I expect that all students will have read each book prior to our meeting. Without adequate preparation by all members, it is impossible to have an engaging and effective seminar.

Your grade will be based on four elements:

1. Class participation, which consists both of regular participation in seminar discussions and weekly emails sent to seminar participants by 9pm on Sundays before meetings listing 3-5 questions about the material that s/he would like to discuss. (10% of the total)

2. Class presentations, which will be given by each student twice throughout the semester. In each presentation, the student will introduce the reading for the week, highlight the main points, and offer up some issues for discussion. The format for these presentations will be discussed during the first meeting. (10% of the total)
3. Three reaction papers (3-4 double-spaced pages) in which students respond to ideas, debates, conflicts, and contradictions in the material read. The papers may be written for any week throughout the semester (turned in the week after we discuss the topic in class). (10% each; 30% of the total)
4. A mock comprehensive exam, which will be administered during the final meeting of the seminar. (50% of the total)

Your final grade will be assigned on the following scale:

A	=	93-100	B+	=	87-89	C+	=	77-79	D+	=	67-69
A-	=	90-92	B	=	83-86	C	=	73-76	D	=	65-66
			B-	=	80-82	C-	=	70-72	F	=	Below 65

Academic Integrity:

You are expected to adhere to all aspects of the University of Pittsburgh guidelines on academic integrity. Failure to cite external sources of ideas, concepts, and facts in written work will be penalized. Plagiarism will result in automatic failure of the course. For Pitt's written guidelines on academic integrity, visit: <http://www.provost.pitt.edu/info/acguidelinespdf.pdf>.

Required Books:

The following books have been ordered and are available at The Book Center. They can also be purchased (usually for less) on Amazon or some other online site. Note that the Hirschman book required for Week 12 is out of print. There are five copies of the 1980 and 1969 versions available at Hillman (either is acceptable). If you do not secure one of those copies, you will need to use EZ Borrow or Inter-Library Loan relatively early in the semester so that you can be sure to have a copy in time to prepare for our meeting that week.
